Food for Thought

Reading 1 Exodus 16.2-4. 12-15, 31a
Responsorial Psalm The Lord gave them the bread of heaven
Reading II Ephesians 4.17, 20-24
Gospel John 6.24-35

Jesus continually contrasts the temporary nature of the work of God in the Hebrew scriptures and the eternal nature of His own work.

We live in the time of Jesus, when His hour of death and resurrection has come. With Him we can never only hunger or thirst for the Kingdom of God as it is near to us and within us. We thirst for more than of what we already have.

THE ARCHBISHOP'S MONTHLY PRAYER INTENTIONS - AUGUST

"That, coming out of our shells, we approach those who are in the outskirts when it comes to human and social relations."

Reflection: Western society is geared more towards how we look than who we are. We judge other people by what they are worth, or what they have accomplished, instead of by who they really are. We exclude many who live on the edge of our world. We are called to live together. Many community organizations work to join up with those who live on the edge. How can I, individually or collectively, get involved in this project?

Our faith response: From the first day of its foundation, the Christian Church, following Jesus' example, has organized itself to invite into its fold those who were living on the edge. Think of the call for deacons in Chapter 6 of the Acts of the Apostles. Jesus, by His actions, has given us many examples: the adulteress, the Samaritan woman, the man born blind, the young rich man, etc... In these meetings, Jesus went out of his comfort zone to offer help to those who needed it. Today, Pope Francis invites us, following Jesus and Church tradition, to join up with people living on the edge. He writes: "Every Christian and every community will discern what road our Lord asks us to follow, but we are all invited to answer that call, to come out of our comfort zone, and have the courage to visit those on the outskirts who need to receive the Light of the Gospel."¹ What, as a Christian community, can we do for those living on the periphery?

Questions we need to ask ourselves

Sunday, August 2nd: I strive to inform myself on the community organizations in my area who work with those living on the outskirts of society. I suggest to my parish executive that they invite one of these organizations to come and talk to the parishioners about their mission.

Sunday, August 9th: I think of those who work and get involved in the Neighborhood Houses in order to improve the lives of those in their area.
